

An abstract painting featuring a dark, textured background. Scattered across the surface are numerous small, stylized butterflies in shades of yellow and orange, some with red markings. Interspersed among the butterflies are pieces of white and light blue paper, appearing as if they have been torn or scattered. The overall composition is dense and layered, with a sense of movement and depth. The bottom edge of the painting is a solid, bright yellow band.

"Do nothing from selfishness or empty conceit, but with humility of mind let each of you regard one another as more important than himself;
So not merely look out for your own personal interests, but also for the interests of others"
