

Title: Would You, Could You, Should You

Composer: Rachel Giam, Joan Tan (Singapore Chinese Girls' School)

Lyricist: Rachel Giam, Joan Tan (Singapore Chinese Girls' School)

Verse 1

Walking down the crowded streets
Eyes are falling to their feet
People using headphones, isolated.
Everybody's in their own world
Minding their own silly business
We meet eye to eye but we don't say a word.

Pre-chorus

Would you, could you, should you
Do you, are you, will you
Can you be a little bit nicer?
I say
Would you, could you, should you,
Do you, are you, will you,
Can you be a little bit kinder?

Chorus

Cos I wish our world could be a little bit kinder (A little bit kinder)
And maybe all of us could change for the better (For the better)
Cos I wish our world could see the smiles across our face
And maybe one day our world, could be a little kinder, kinder, kinder.

Verse 2 (plus Pre-chorus echo)

Coming home from their own lives	(Would you, could you, should you)
No one greeted, we walk by	(Do you, are you, will you)
Faces that we know are now strangers.	(Can you be a little bit nicer? I say)
Just for the sake of asking questions	(Would you, could you, should you)
My mum ask me how my day was	(Do you, are you, will you)
All I reply was "it was okay."	(Can you be a little bit kinder?)

Chorus

Pre-chorus
