

Title : Fall

Composer : Leonard Ng

Lyricist : Leonard Ng

You came to me in the Fall of '96
And every waking moment of it sticks
Like the ice outside on the pavement floor
And on the steps that mark the path to your door
It was kind, so kind of you to say
That love was never meant to be this way
You said you had to start your life anew
And the hardest thing was all of this was true

But I grew weary as the days went by Every once in a while I'd have to look to the skies
I saw two roads that were one
But I didn't like the person
The person I'd become

So will you think of me sometimes
In the snowless winters that you will find
Do you wonder if what we trusted in
Could build a bridge that ever had a chance
A chance to begin

So I think of all the choices that you had
And know that there were none that could be shared
And all the time I ever could have stayed
Would not have made you think you could be swayed
So you were strong, so strong in your conviction
With me the constant cause of all this friction
I must have pushed you out too far at times
In this reel of Life that I could not rewind
